

GOING GREEN

Eco-friendly products that help save the earth

The organic bath collection from Danica is woven from 100% organic unbleached cotton yarn grown without pesticides or insecticides. No chemicals or dyes are used in the production process. The line includes towels, a bathrobe, shower curtain and bath mat.

Gibson's new ECO-FRIENDLY HOME brand includes tableware made using a process called "bamboo fusion". It is non-petroleum based and uses a proprietary blend of bamboo fibers, plant starches and other natural materials. The products are durable enough to go in the dishwasher but natural enough to break down safely during composting. Gibson's eco-line also offers a range of recycled rubber-wood products for the kitchen (shown above).

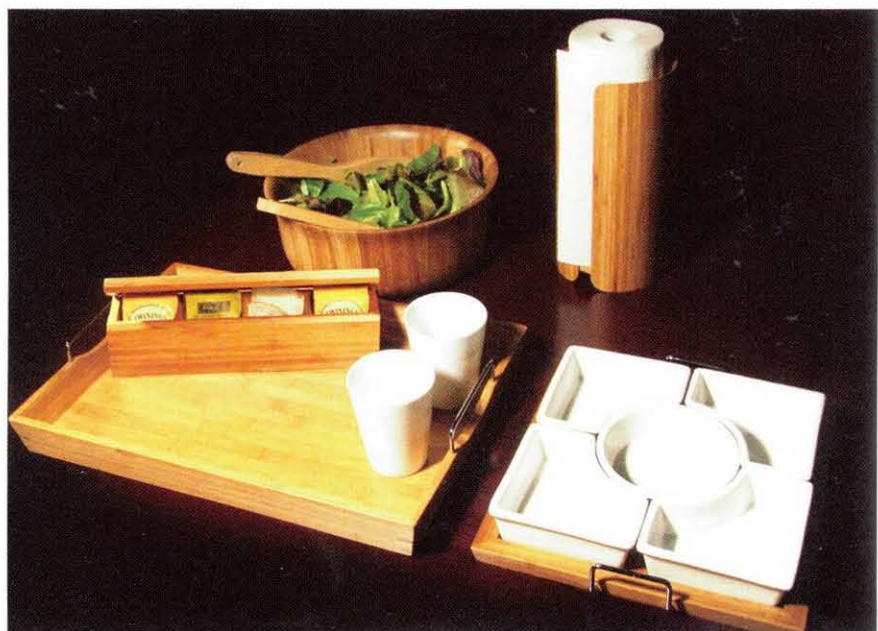

The initial launch of GreenGourmet cookware from Cuisinart will include open-stock skillets in three sizes. The pans are free of PTFE and PFOA substances. The exclusive Ceramica non-stick surface is applied at half the temperature of traditional coatings and won't peel off. The handles are made of 70% recycled steel. Even the packaging is made from 100% recycled materials.

MÜkitchen has taken bamboo and turned it into a durable, stylish fabric that's perfect for the kitchen. The woody plant creates a soft, strong, and naturally bacteria-resistant fabric. It's durable, never gets musty and is softer and more absorbent than cotton. From Danesco.

The delicate grain of the Conserve bamboo collection from Counseltron has a rich, distinctive honey colour. The lightweight material is 16% harder than maple and 50% stronger than red oak. It's resistant to moisture, stains and mildew, making it perfect for use in the kitchen or outdoors.

Trudeau recently introduced the EcoFriendly collection of products for consumers on the go. The line includes the Commuter, a colourful travel container made of unbreakable polycarbonate. The twist top lid features a wide opening and an easy-carry wrist strap. The Commuter comes in hot pink, black or white.
